

ABSTRACT

The present invention is directed to a traffic simulation algorithm for an asynchronous transfer mode communications (ATM) network. The algorithm recognizes that packets in ATM networks can have interarrival times that are lognormally distributed or lognormally and normally distributed. Lognormal and, in some cases, normal random
5 number generators are used to generate packet interarrival times of a synthetic traffic stream.

M:\4366\25\Patent Application.wpd

006090" 244T6560